This report provides perspectives on key aspects of the global sourcing market in San Jose

San Jose | At a glance

Mature location for BPS with English-proficient talent and favorable operating environment

KEY FACTOIDS

- 50,000-55,000 annual tertiary graduates
- Annual operating cost per FTE 45-50% savings over Dallas 20-25% expensive compared to Mexico City for CC

Current overview

- Leveraged extensively by both service providers and Global In-house centers (GICs) for voice and non-voice business processes
 - Within BP services, companies typically deliver customer support services, F&A, HR, and supply chain
- Players also leverage San Jose to support regional/global IT services delivery
- One of the largest service delivery destinations in Latin America (LATAM) with 50,000-60,000 FTEs employed pool for global/regional services delivery

Key drivers

- High quality graduate pool with good technical and English language skills
 - Being the largest metropolitan city in Costa Rica, San Jose attracts talent from other locations nearby
 - Strong economic growth and political stability
- Favorable government policies, including high exemption on different taxes, such as corporate income tax (for 8 years), local sales tax, exports tax, and import duties for enterprises

Key challenges

- Operating costs for IT-BP service delivery are high as compared to most other Latin American locations
- High competitive intensity due to presence of multiple peers results in constrained availability of talent
- Minor concerns regarding business operating risks due to rise in domestic illegal activity and vulnerability to natural disasters; however, business impact has been limited

San Jose | Risk profile (page 1 of 2)

Strong economic growth and geopolitical stability makes San Jose an attractive destination for global services delivery

Parameter	Everest Group rating	Comments
Geopolitical	Highly favorable	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Costa Rica holds 20th rank out of 167 countries in the Democracy Index 2018 by Economic Intelligence Unit (EIU) Costa Rica has one of the most stable governments in Latin America. It is one of the few Latin that has been steadily democratic since 1950 Costa Rica abolished its army in 1949, due to which it has avoided military involvement in political affairs Costa Rica's political stability and no external intervention, especially from the U.S., has played a large part in its development
Macroeconomic	Favorable, some concerns	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Costa Rica has shown strong aggregate growth since it emerged from recession in 1997. GDP increased from US$ 52.6 billion in 2015 to US$ 61.5 billion in 2017, though unemployment rate remained high at over 9% Costa Rica holds 12th rank among 77 emerging economies in the Inclusive Development Index Report by World Economic Forum (WEF). It has one of the highest GDP per capita in Latin America Moody's, S&P global rating, and Fitch have downgraded Costa Rica's rating to B1, B+, and B+ respectively, owing to poor liquidity, rising debt, and large budget deficit
Infrastructure	Favorable, some concerns	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Global Competitiveness Index 2018-2019 (World Economic Forum) ranks Costa Rica 78th out of 140 countries for the quality of its infrastructure Internet penetration is among the highest in Latin America and the telecom infrastructure is relatively modern Though the quality of transportation system is poor in a lot of places in Costa Rica, San Jose offers well developed transportation system
